TWO WOMEN IN WHITE SLAVE CASE MAY CAUSE FEDERAL SHAKE-UP

Young Wife of Millionaire Edwards, Indicted as Slaver, Battles for His Liberty—Girl Accuser Denies Charges Made by His Friends.

A battle between two women—one a wife, formerly a society girl, battling for the reputation of her husband; the other a young stenographer, complainant in a white slave case—may cause a great upheaval in the federal service in the middle west.

The first is Mrs. William Rufus Edwards, wife of the wealthy St. Paul lumberman, indicted for violation of the Mann act.

The other woman is Ada M. Cox, complainant in the Mann act case and who was recently awarded a $17,500 breach of promise judgment against Edwards.

An inquiry into the indictment is to be made. It is rumored that many exposures will be made. Friends of Edwards have gone as far as to intimate that certain federal officers were promised part of Miss Cox's judgment money.

On the other hand, Miss Cox, who resides at 4528 Magnolia av., believes that political influence is lined up against her. Edwards is prominent in St. Paul and his wife is a niece of United States Senator Moses Clapp of Minnesota.

Charles F. DeWoody, former special agent of the department of justice and now in charge of the Cleveland bureau, who is credited with producing the indictment of Ed-
